Chairperson's introduction

First time voting

Three generations came together for this young Tasmanian's first time voting.

This report provides a comprehensive outline of what has been a significant and challenging year for the Tasmanian Electoral Commission. My intention is not to repeat or summarise any of what transpired in 2020-21. Instead, I have reflected on how the Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner and their team responded by reference to our purpose, vision and values, all three of which have empowered them in meeting these challenges.

Our purpose of providing independent, impartial and high-quality electoral services to the people of Tasmania guided us in ensuring, despite the unaccommodating timing of the State election, the conduct of responsive, democratic elections.

Our vision, requiring that we maintain confidence in the integrity of Tasmania's electoral processes and make it simple for people to understand and participate, resulted in many innovative practices aimed at ensuring electors had the best possible opportunity to take part in the periodic Legislative Council and the State elections.

Our responses were, in all respects, consistent with our values of respect, integrity, adaptability and collaboration. This report highlights where, how and who with, the Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner and their team performed so effectively this year. In saying this, I acknowledge the support provided by other sectors of the Tasmanian public service in particular the Department of Justice. My thanks to all of you.

The Tasmanian community should be proud of the work carried out by the Commission in 2020-21. On behalf of Karen, myself, and all of this community, thanks to every staff member.

Electoral Commissioner's review

The 2020–21 year provided two events unique in Tasmanian democratic history: two rounds of periodic Legislative Council elections and a shared polling day for Tasmanian Upper and Lower House elections.

As stated in the previous annual report, the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic resulted in the deferral of the 2020 Legislative Council elections. These were the first periodic elections to have an August polling day. The elections were conducted successfully with a range of new COVID-safe measures. Further details are provided within this report.

2021 Parliamentary elections

On Friday 26 March 2021, the Premier called an early State election which included a shared polling day (Saturday 1 May) with the 2021 Legislative Council elections.

One may naturally assume that having a shared polling day for both Houses is an effective and efficient way to run elections. This is only the case if the election rules are structured to easily allow it, which is not the case in Tasmania.

The unprecedented overlap of these two elections required (within an extremely short period of time) a considerable elevation in planning, workload, recruitment, resourcing and logistics, along with the development of new training material and processes.

The most critical element to any organisation is its workforce. The workload from the 2021 Parliamentary elections tested all staff – new and experienced. The tenacity, resilience and professionalism of the TEC team enabled them to rise to the challenge.

Three key changes moving forwards

The coming year will include three significant changes to electoral administration in Tasmania.

In September 2020, the TEC lodged a formal submission to the Anti-Discrimination Commissioner requesting an exemption to permit the TEC to request and consider information pertaining to the political affiliation and activity of an individual employed or contracted by the TEC. The exemption was granted on 6 January for a period of three years. Further information is provided within the report.

In January 2021, on behalf of the TEC, the Department of Justice signed a lease for an ongoing office and election centre in Launceston for the conduct of all north and north-west Parliamentary and local government elections. The new location proved to be vital to the TEC's ability to conduct the 2021 Parliamentary elections. Further information is provided within the report.

In February 2021, the Final Report of the Electoral Act Review was released by the Premier and Attorney-General, with the Government accepting in principle all recommendations in the Review, including the creation of an electoral disclosure and funding scheme for Tasmanian Parliamentary political participants. It is expected that the TEC will play a significant role in the establishment and administration of this scheme.

Tasmania loses a great electoral administrator

In my first Commissioner's Review I talked of how I walked in the footsteps of those electoral giants that had come before me: David Farrell, Bruce Taylor and Julian Type. Soon after the State election was called, Bruce was diagnosed with a terminal illness. He passed away on the day of the declaration of the polls.

Bruce's great intellect, understanding of electoral administrative complexity and daily fortitude to take on any new or unexpected challenge was a critical reason for the office's many achievements over an 18-year period. Now, only 11 years after retirement, he is gone. I will miss his smile, his support and his wisdom.

One thing instilled by my predecessors is that the Commissioner and electoral staff have an important stewardship role:

- » to ensure electoral events are accurate, accessible, transparent and compliant,
- » to defend the democratic principles and values of our post, and
- » when the time comes, to pass the baton on.

Bruce was the healthiest of the four of us until he wasn't. We were and still are a family, spending more time together in the trenches during elections than with our other close loved ones. We do this for a purpose greater than ourselves.

The next generation share in this calling, this commitment to the Tasmanian people and our precious, treasured, and unusual democracy. It is through their unyielding commitment to the 2021 Parliamentary elections that so many extraordinary things could be achieved. I thank our permanent staff and the key election casuals that all stayed the course and saw it through.

 - (b) to consider and report to the Minister on matters referred to it by the Minister,
 - (c) to promote public awareness of electoral and parliamentary topics by means of educational and information programs and by other means,
 - (d) to provide information and advice on electoral issues to the Parliament, the Government, Government departments and State authorities, within the meaning of the State Service Act 2000,
 - (e) to publish material on matters relating to its functions,
 - (f) to investigate and prosecute illegal practices under this Act.
- (2) The Commission may do all things necessary or convenient to be done, including employing persons, for or in connection with or incidental to the performance of its functions.
- (3) Without limiting subsection (2) and in addition to any power conferred on the Commission by any other provision of this Act or any other Act, the Commission, in addition to conducting Assembly elections or Council elections may conduct ballots or elections for a person or organisation and may charge fees for that service.

The Tasmanian Electoral Commission (cont'd)

The Commission and the Electoral Commissioner have legal responsibilities under the following legislation:

- » Electoral Act 2004
- » Electoral Regulations 2005

Electoral roll management

The Commission, and the Electoral Commissioner, have statutory responsibilities for the independent and impartial conduct of Tasmanian elections and referendums.

An up-to-date and accurate electoral roll is an essential prerequisite for the conduct of elections. The State of Tasmania and the Commonwealth of Australia have a joint management arrangement whereby the TEC and the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) jointly manage and maintain the electoral rolls for federal, state and local government elections. The Electoral Commissioner is a member of the Electoral Council of Australia and New Zealand (ECANZ) which regularly discusses strategies for maintenance of the electoral roll.

All electors enrolled on the State roll are entitled to vote at the local government elections for the municipal area in which their enrolled address is situated.

Purpose, vision and values

In 2020, all staff of the Commission came together to articulate and codify the purpose, vision and values that underpin the culture and integrity of the work of the TEC.

Purpose

To provide independent, impartial and high-quality electoral services to the people of Tasmania.

Vision

To maintain confidence in the integrity of Tasmania's electoral processes and make it simple for people to understand and participate.

2020 Legislative Council elections

2020 – Huon and Rosevears (deferred)

The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in the deferral of the 2020 Legislative Council elections. On Friday 12 June 2020 the Director of Public Health advised the Premier that there was no longer a significant risk to public health by holding the Upper House elections. Following this advice, the Premier announced Saturday 1 August as polling day and Her Excellency issued a Proclamation appointing that date.

The writs for Legislative Council elections for the Huon and Rosevears divisions were issued on Monday 22 June 2020. When nominations closed at 12 noon on Thursday 2 July, 12 candidates (5 female, 7 male and 0 undefined) had been nominated – 6 candidates for Huon and 6 candidates for Rosevears. Bastian Seidel was elected as the new Member for Huon and Jo Palmer was elected as the new Member for Rosevears. Election results for Huon and Rosevears are provided in Appendix B. A 'snapshot' of the 2020 elections is provided on pages 20–21.

A different election

The fast moving COVID situation added to the complexity and uncertainty surrounding these elections. With some other states in lockdown and the possibility that part or all of Tasmania could also go into lockdown at any stage during the seven-week election period, the Commission made a range of changes to voting services for these elections.

The TEC adapted the election communication strategy to include additional awareness material to provide specific messaging of election COVID-safe measures and changes to voting services.

The special arrangements provided at these elections contributed to participation levels exceeding expectations, with Huon participation increasing by +0.39% and Rosevears participation increasing by +3.49%.

Postal vote application forms mailed to all electors

Anticipating voter reluctance to attend a polling place during the pandemic, the Commission took the unprecedented decision to mail a postal vote application to all electors during the nomination period.

Typically, around 5% of electors complete a postal vote at Legislative Council elections. In 2020, the number of postal votes increased to 46.9%. The expansion of postal voting services was considered a critical factor in enabling a strong participation rate for these elections in such a difficult and uncertain time.

No mobile or interstate pre-poll voting services

Hospitals and nursing homes were considered key areas of vulnerability during the first year of the pandemic, with Public Health setting significant restrictions to visitations.

As a safety precaution the TEC did not approve mobile or interstate voting. Eligible electors located interstate were encouraged to apply for a postal vote. Special arrangements were established with nursing homes and hospitals where a staff member within each institution coordinated a bulk postal voting service.

Longer early voting period and an increased number of pre-poll centres

An additional pre-poll centre together with extended early voting hours provided broader access to vote early in case COVID-safe restrictions increased prior to polling day.

All pre-poll centres were open for extended periods (8:30am–6pm) across the full four-week early voting period.

The strong participation in postal and pre-poll voting resulted in over 50% of electors voting before polling day for the first time at a Tasmanian Parliamentary election.

Creating a COVID-safe environment

The Commission implemented a range of changes to polling places and counting centres to ensure staff and public safety.

The following elements were included at all polling places:

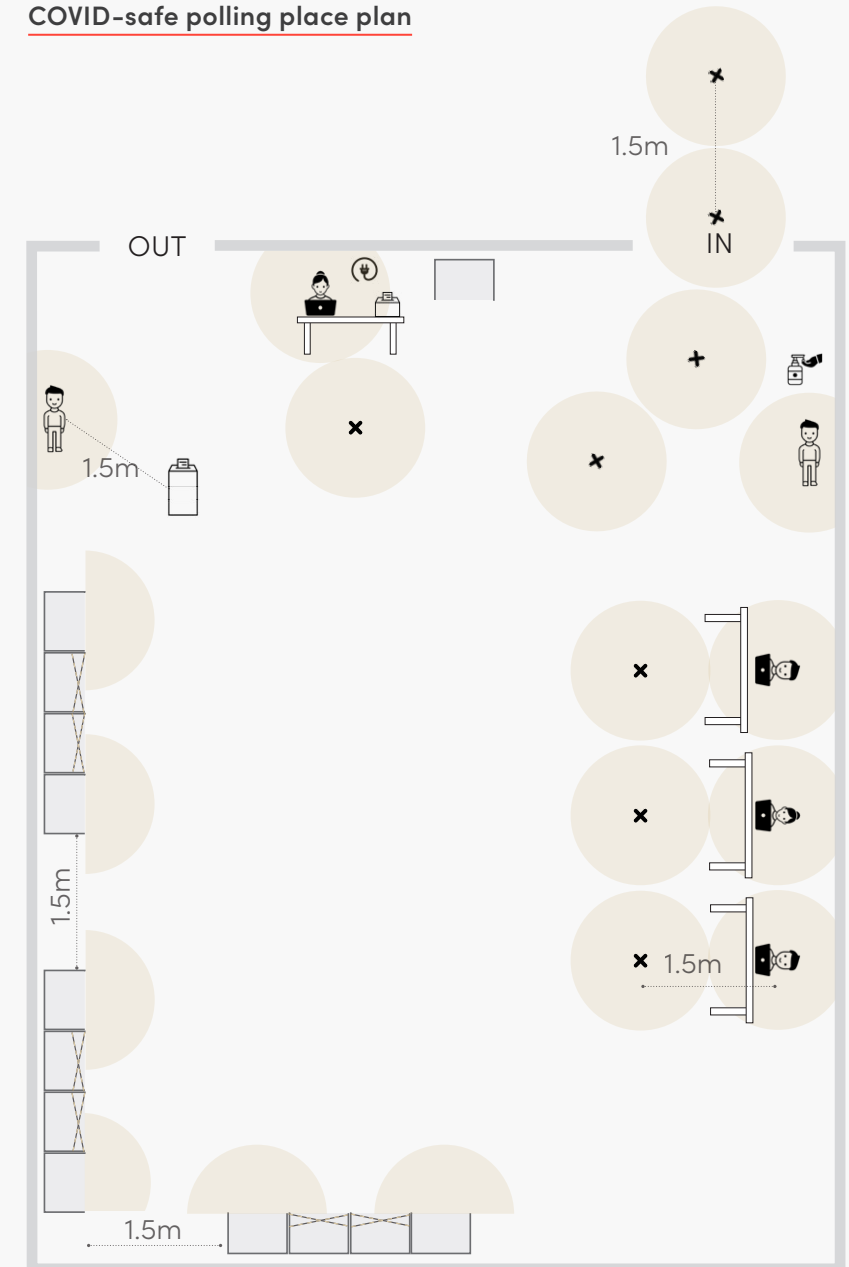

- » taped physical distancing markers outside and inside the polling place,
- » automatic free standing hand sanitiser units on entry,
- » an additional staff person to welcome and remind electors to maintain COVID-safe requirements,
- » acrylic screens for all issuing staff,
- » voting screens spaced apart and equipped with easily cleanable mats,
- » single-use pencils,
- » N95 masks for scrutineers to wear when viewing election processes, and
- » contract cleaning staff working throughout the day.

Due to physical distancing requirements, many post-polling logistical and operational configurations needed to be adjusted, including for the large return of postal votes.

The TEC established a staggered counting process for postal votes - with 5,000 per division counted and results published on Saturday night, and a further 4,500 per division counted and published on Sunday.

A range of other post polling day processes - including the provisional distribution of preferences - were spread across an extended period rather than completed on the Sunday.

2021 Parliamentary elections

A 'snapshot' of the 2021 Parliamentary elections is provided overleaf.

2021 State election

On 26 March 2021, Her Excellency the Governor informed the Electoral Commissioner that, on the advice of the Premier, she had prorogued the Parliament and dissolved the House of Assembly to enable a general election to be held on Saturday 1 May 2021, the same polling day for the 2021 Legislative Council elections. These elections would see the first general election for the renamed division of Clark (formerly Denison), as new House of Assembly electoral boundaries came into effect following the 2018 State election.

At the close of nominations, noon on Wednesday 7 April 2021, 105 candidates (47 female, 56 male and 2 undefined) had been accepted. The Hare-Clark counting of votes commenced after the 10-day period for the return of postal votes. The full list of elected Members is included in Appendix C.

Election tally room

Once again the TEC provided a public tally room on election night. Following consultation with Public Health, the tally room was able to go ahead with a range of COVID-safe measures in place, such as seating-only areas, sanitiser stations, checking-in with the new 'Check in TAS' app, physical distancing when standing and capacity restrictions.

The Hotel Grand Chancellor's Federation Ballroom was the location for the tally room, with doors opening to the public at 6:00pm. Between 6:30pm and 11:30pm, 127 State election result updates were displayed on the electronic tally boards.

The ABC and Southern Cross set up full broadcast studios. SBS, WIN News, Sky News, various print media and Pulse FM provided onsite coverage.

The tally room provides a unique experience, where the media, public, political leaders and candidates from across the political spectrum gather, see the results and discuss the outcome. The night was a great success and continues to be an important landmark on Tasmania's democratic landscape.

The TEC is the only Australian electoral commission to still provide a physical tally room.

Luncheon at Government House

Her Excellency the Honourable Kate Warner and Mr Warner hosted a visit to Government House on 31 May for TEC staff, returning officers and assistant returning officers.

Following lunch, Her Excellency and Mr Warner took the staff on a tour of Government House – one of the last tours they would give, as this was the final week of Her Excellency's term in office.

Our sincere thanks go to Her Excellency for this generous offer and a fitting way to mark the end of the State election.

Results for Derwent, Mersey and Windermere are provided in Appendix B.

2021 Legislative Council elections

The 2021 periodic Legislative Council elections in the divisions of Derwent, Mersey and Windermere commenced with the issue of the writs on Monday 22 March 2021. Nominations from nine candidates (1 female, 8 male and 0 undefined) had been accepted when nominations closed at 12 noon on Wednesday 31 March.

Craig Farrell was re-elected as the Member for Derwent, Michael Gaffney was re-elected unopposed as the Member for Mersey, and Nick Duigan was elected as the new Member for Windermere.

Unexpectedly, the participation rates for the Legislative Council divisions were around 9% lower than the House of Assembly divisions. The Commission undertook an analysis of participation rates at the 2021 Legislative Council elections, which was presented to the President of the Legislative Council prior to the end of the appeal period for these elections.

Complexities of dual elections

A timeline illustrating key dates for these elections is provided on pages 34–35.

By design, the processes and rules for Tasmanian Upper and Lower House elections differ considerably. This is not the case for any other Australian bicameral parliament – where joint elections are the norm.

While State elections have marginally overlapped with periodic Legislative Council elections previously, conducting the 2021 Parliamentary elections – with its syncopated key dates and shared polling day – was significantly more complicated than many might expect.

Section 10 of the Constitution Act 1934 states: the Governor and the Legislative Council and House of Assembly shall together constitute the Parliament of Tasmania. While the State election may be a larger event with a greater profile, Upper House elections have equal importance under the law.

With this principle in mind, the TEC had to consider the following additional electoral administrative consequences of these elections:

- » Different elector bases: 394,432 electors were required to vote at the State election while only 53,960 electors were required to vote at the contested Legislative Council elections.
- » Overlapping electoral boundaries: While the Legislative Council divisions of Mersey and Windermere existed within the electoral boundaries of the House of Assembly divisions of Braddon and Bass respectively, the Legislative Council division of Derwent stretches across parts of the House of Assembly divisions of Lyons and Clark.
- » Campaign expenditure limits for the Upper House: The Electoral Act 2004 establishes an expenditure limit for all Legislative Council candidates ($18,000 in 2021). There are no expenditure limits for State elections.
- » Limits on who can campaign: For Legislative Council elections, political parties and third parties are not permitted to incur any electoral expenditure for the purpose of promoting a candidate. There are no limitations on election spending for State elections.

- » Returning officers conducting elections for different Houses: Each Legislative Council returning officer was also appointed as returning officer for a House of Assembly division. Due to the electoral boundaries, the responsibility for ordinary voting in Derwent polling places had to be shared by the Clark and Lyons returning officers.
- » Different close of roll dates: The rolls for the State election closed seven days after the rolls for the Legislative Council elections. During that week: 2,533 Tasmanian electors changed their enrolled address and a further 2,345 electors were either added to or removed from the State roll.
- » Different early voting periods: The staggered start to the two sets of Parliamentary elections resulted in an additional week of the early voting period for the Legislative Council elections, which could cause confusion and result in some electors being disenfranchised from the State election.
- » Different rolls for two Parliamentary elections: Electors needing to vote at both sets of Parliamentary elections were required to be marked off two certified lists.
- » Enabling some electors to vote twice: How does the TEC adjust its delivery of voting services within its immediate resources when one-fifth of electors are required to vote in two sets of Parliamentary elections?
- » Impact on polling place training: The model developed to enable some electors to vote twice, will require specialised training.
- » Impact on election awareness campaigning: How does the TEC ensure important Legislative Council election information is not lost during a State election campaign?

Complexities of dual elections (cont'd)

Addressing the electoral administrative consequences of the 2021 Parliamentary elections

The TEC undertook new administrative structures, relationships and innovations, to deliver these elections.

Electoral communication

The differences in electoral campaigning rules between the two sets of Parliamentary elections created repercussions for the three political parties standing candidates for elections in both Houses. As soon as the State election was announced, the Electoral Commissioner wrote to these parties to inform them of the complexities of the legislation and to encourage them to ensure their campaigning was compliant with the legislation.

To ensure that electors could recognise both elections, the TEC ran two separate advertising campaigns. Details of these campaigns is provided on page 54.

The TEC also reached out to the state public service, the business community and other electoral commissions, seeking additional resources needed to conduct compliant elections within a 36-day period. The scope and scale of these relationships and support was illustrated by an infographic the TEC released in the days preceding polling day (opposite).

Infographic published in the last week of polling

How does it all get done?

- 5 weeks
- 5 House of Assembly divisions
- 3 Legislative Council divisions
- 114 candidates
- Over 448,000 electors!
- 262 polling day polling places
- 22 Tasmanian & interstate pre-poll centres
- 19 mobile polling teams
- 35,000 postal votes
- Over 41,000 pre-poll votes (so far)

It takes a community to conduct elections

Thanks, Tasmania!

Two election awareness campaigns

With the overlapping elections, the commission has run two separate election awareness campaigns. The two advertising agencies have come together to provide an effective blend of campaigns that has kept the key message and hook of each campaign, as well as producing additional material to provide a sensible message for Tasmanians.

Dual polling places need new training material

The overlap of the elections has resulted in the need to establish dual polling places for the two elections. As these elections have difference rules and different election rolls, significant new processes and training needed to be developed.

A local animation company rose to the challenge of a 3 day turn around for each of 3 animations which illustrate the new dual processes when setting up, issuing ballot papers and counting.

Ballot papers

Whether it be ballot papers, forms, checklists, postal votes, elector brochures or manuals, there are a significant number and variety of printed material required for an election. Even more when two elections significantly overlap.

Seven printers located in the north and south of the State have answered the call at providing high quality locally distributed printed material on very short timeframes that have underpinned these elections.

Other Commissions

The Australian and Victorian Electoral Commissions provided additional netbooks and other polling material allowing the TEC to provide sufficient services for the overlapping elections.

Vehicles and election logistics

Polling places cannot be established without a significant logistics team and transport arrangements. COVID-19 has resulted in a limited supply of rental vehicles in the State.

The Justice Department provided logistics support. The Health Department supplied 2 fleet vehicles for returning officer staff, and Radcliffe Transport provided access to trucks for equipment deliveries.

Where do you go? To a sign maker

The calling of a snap election means that you need to find new office and polling place locations at very short notice. Sometimes these locations are unexpected or out of the way. To enable electors and candidates to find services requires the production of many varied signs and banners.

Two Tasmanian companies have been agile and creative to provide signs to meet our needs.

Complexities of dual elections (cont'd)

Operational solutions through innovation

The announcement of the State election immediately preceded the Easter break, providing a concentrated period for TEC staff to develop the new structures, training material and resources for the elections and to roll out election management office infrastructure, including the following:

- » development of a dual polling place model where electors are checked on both election rolls and provided the appropriate ballot paper(s),
- » adjustment of polling place staff structure and close of poll procedures to ensure the separate storage and processing of Legislative Council election material and ballot papers,
- » appointment of all pre-poll voting centres as dual polling places,
- » a delay in the opening of Legislative Council pre-poll centres to coincide with the commencement of the State election early voting period,
- » Commission approval of a single postal vote application enabling electors required to vote at both sets of Parliamentary elections to automatically be issued postal vote material for each election, and
- » expansion of mobile polling services for the Legislative Council elections to include major Hobart and Launceston hospitals to simplify voting services for Windermere and Derwent electors.

The key elements of the model and the need to develop training and associated resources are discussed in the Innovations section of this report.

Support for inexperienced election managers

While the TEC had identified its pool of election managers for the next State election, the early announcement removed the opportunity to provide extensive training and hands-on learning for the 13 staff – 10 of which had no previous election management experience. To support these staff the TEC located additional experienced election practitioners in the northern and southern election offices.

The TEC Elections Coordinator, Sarah Mathews, relocated to Launceston from late March until polling weekend to support and mentor the northern based staff.

Former Braddon assistant returning officer, Sherri Nolan, was seconded from the AEC to the northern office as an assistant returning officer to provide hands-on expertise and support with critical, complex processes such as the return of polling place materials within Bass, Braddon and the northern parts of Lyons.

A retired former returning officer, Anne Scott, provided administrative support to the southern office throughout the election period.

For processes after polling day including the Hare-Clark counts, the Deputy Commissioner and the Operations Manager provided assistance to the northern office, while the Commissioner, Elections Coordinator and ICT Officer provided assistance to the southern office.

Complexities of dual elections (cont'd)

Review of the election and moving forward

As Parliamentary elections have immutable deadlines, these elections required TEC staff¹ to find and roll out solutions within extremely short timeframes under high levels of pressure. The unpredicted shared polling day and the associated complexities of the dual elections meant these elections were conducted on the thinnest of margins across various resourcing and operational areas. The TEC was also fortunate that:

- » a suitable southern warehouse could be found and leased within 24 hours of the State election being called,
- » returning officer teams identified for the State election were available to commence work with one day's notice,
- » AGFEST did not coincide with the first Saturday in May and the Mersey election was an uncontested ballot, reducing the resources and logistical requirements for the shared polling day,
- » there was no requirement for a Tasmanian lockdown to mitigate a local outbreak of COVID-19 cases,
- » no major cyber security attacks challenged our systems,
- » Australia Post provided a sufficient service for Tasmanian mail, and
- » all election staff remained at their posts throughout the full election period².

Each of these elements had the capacity to undermine the integrity of the 2021 Parliamentary elections and without mitigation, threaten the electoral franchise and the conduct of future elections.

With the precedent set, the TEC must now plan for the possibility of a shared polling day in May 2024 or May 2025. The TEC will therefore look to change its polling place modelling and preparation timetable which will require a significant increase to election critical infrastructure to be better prepared for this possibility.

² Some electoral managers have indicated that they would not be prepared to work on future elections due to the work pressure and heavy workload.

Establishing a northern election office

A new northern strategy

Following the review of electoral activities in 2018 and cyber security and IT needs, the TEC undertook a search for an ongoing operational space for north and north-west elections.

The TEC maintained a small northern office in Henty House for running Legislative Council elections and processing Legislative Council enrolment forms until 1993, with AEC regional offices taking on returning officer duties for Legislative Council elections from 1996.

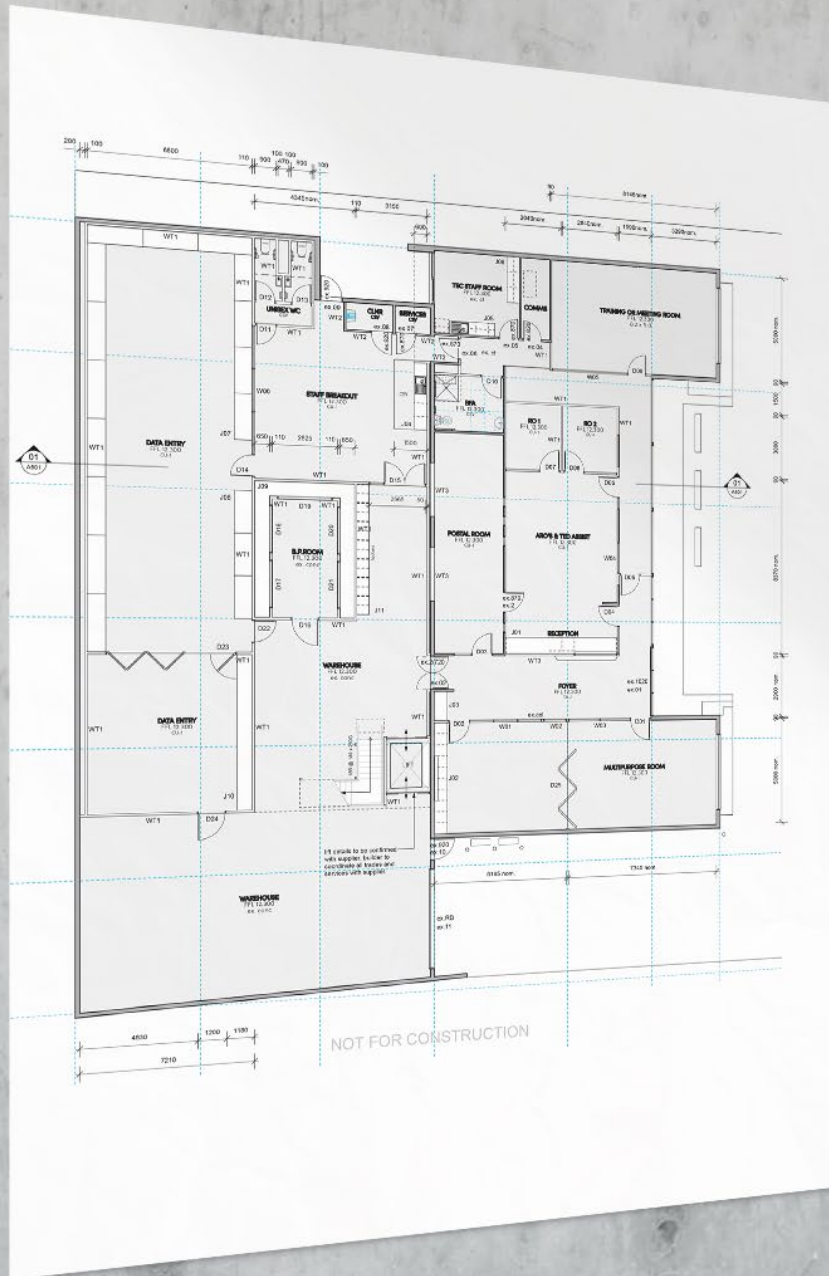

The arrangement with the AEC for all Tasmanian Parliamentary and local government elections concluded in 2014, which significantly impacted TEC structural and operational arrangements, particularly for elections based in the north and north-west.

Conducting elections typically requires large warehousing spaces, cyber secure networking infrastructure, corporate office space, and robust and secure storage for large quantities of materials. Leasing locations that meet these specific needs has proven very difficult.

Over the 2015–2019 period, the TEC leased eight north and north-west locations, including a former bank office in Launceston, a converted house in Ulverstone, the former Tasmanian Board Mills offices in St Leonards, a third-floor government office space in Reece House in Burnie and a former industrial small business site in Cooe. These venues presented significant operational challenges including the need to hire additional security. The Commission took the view that these risks would be mitigated by the establishment of a northern office.

A permanent northern office provides the following advantages:

- » a permanent, suitable location with appropriate IT infrastructure and physical spaces for running northern elections,
- » the reduction in resourcing for, and risks associated with, identifying and leasing north and north-west locations for each election, particularly in the case of an early State election,
- » a regular electoral workload at one location enabling the TEC to develop a broader election casual staffing pool and the electoral skill base within that pool, and
- » a consistent northern presence will build a stronger connection with the local community.

Establishing a northern election office (cont'd)

For the first 10 years of the office lease, the TEC will be required to conduct the following north and north-west elections:

Year	Elections
2021	LC Mersey and Windermere HoA Bass and Braddon (Lyons northern depot)
2022	LC McIntyre LG 14 local government councils
2023	LC Launceston and Murchison
2024 ¹	-
2025	LC Montgomery HoA Bass and Braddon (Lyons northern depot)
2026	LC Rosevears LG 14 local government councils
2027	LC Mersey and Windermere

12 Goodman Court, Invermay

From late 2019 the Deputy Electoral Commissioner worked with real estate agents to examine greenfield sites and available commercial properties. In June 2020, 12 Goodman Court, Invermay was identified as the most suitable option.

Purpose-built in 2010 as the showroom, offices and warehouse for a major local locksmith, the site has many advantages including full, single level access across the entire site, large industrial storage and high vehicle access into the warehouse, extensive IT infrastructure, ample on-site car parking, secure high fencing around the entire property, and located within a central Launceston industrial estate.

The TEC worked with the Department of Justice and the Department of Treasury and Finance to negotiate a long-term lease of the property.

1. No northern elections

Refurbishment for the future

It was determined that, with refurbishment, the site would be capable of accommodating the full, secure management of Parliamentary and local government elections.

Refurbishment plans include:

- » offices and administration space for returning officers and their staff,
- » secure storage with capacity for storing large quantities of ballot papers, postal envelopes, and polling place netbooks,
- » a large counting space, and
- » a data entry facility.

Taking possession – 2021 Parliamentary elections

The TEC gained access to the Invermay site on 9 March 2021, enabling the delivery of office furnishings and the set up of ICT infrastructure for the Mersey and Windermere elections.

With the Premier announcing the State election on 26 March, the site was reorganised to also accommodate the Bass and Braddon House of Assembly division elections and a support site for the northern region of the division of Lyons.

As it was not yet fitted out for large scale elections, a further venue was leased for counting over polling weekend.

The tender process for fit-out works is due to commence in July 2021 with an expectation of completion in early 2022 ahead of the conduct of the inaugural Legislative Council election for the division of McIntyre and the September commencement of statewide local government elections.

Political neutrality of staff

Under the Anti-Discrimination Act 1998 a person must not discriminate against another person on the grounds of political belief, affiliation or political activity in connection with employment. However, it is a cornerstone of electoral administration and public expectation that election officials be politically neutral while employed or appointed.

While under the Electoral Act 2004 a person is ineligible to be appointed as a Member of the Commission or as Electoral Commissioner if they have been a member of a registered Australian political party or similar organisation in the past five years, the Act does not impose any political neutrality conditions for permanent and casual staff or contractors. This situation is in contrast with most other Australian electoral jurisdictions, which either provide for political neutrality of staff within their electoral legislation, or under formal exemption arrangements under Equal Opportunity/Anti-Discrimination legislation.

On 23 September 2020, the TEC lodged a request with the Anti-Discrimination Commissioner for an exemption under section 58 of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1998. On 6 January 2021, a three-year exemption was granted to permit the TEC to request and consider information on the following elements in regards to the employment as permanent TEC staff and election staff or the engagement of a contractor:

- (a) Current membership, or membership within the past 5 years, of any political party in any State or Territory or the Commonwealth.
- (b) A course of conduct within the past 5 years directed to supporting the aims of a political party or an independent candidate in a State, Territory or Federal election.
- (c) A person who has held the office of councillor for a Tasmanian local council within the past 5 years.
- (d) A course of conduct within the past 5 years directed towards supporting the political aims of a local councillor.
- (e) A person who has publicly engaged in conduct promoting a political position in respect of an issue currently before the electorate in the election for which that person is to be employed.
- (f) A person who is a member of a lobby group (not being a union or professional association) which promotes a political position in respect of an issue currently before the electorate in the election for which that person is to be employed.

The exemption was Gazetted on 13 January 2021. The Commission is currently establishing a process for evaluating and implementing the effect of the exemption for the range of positions affected.

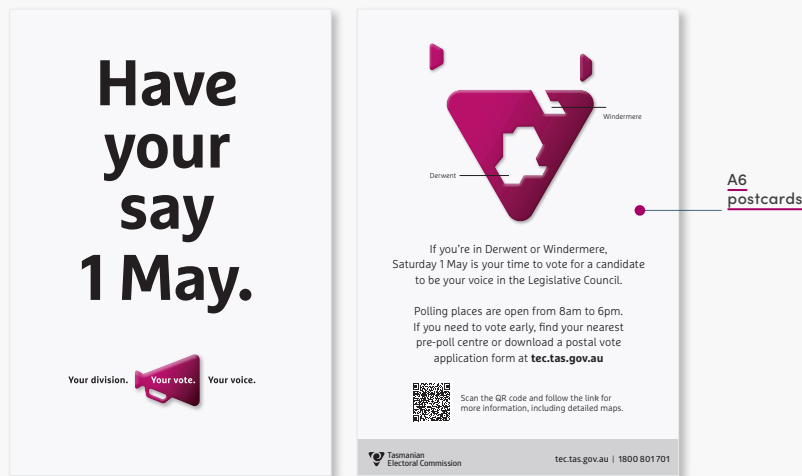

New election awareness campaign

With the primary aims of increasing awareness and encouraging participation, a comprehensive awareness campaign is an important tool in conducting elections. After 16 years of effective service, the TEC bid a fond farewell to the 'Shape Your State' Legislative Council elections awareness campaign.

In November 2020, a request for tender process was launched to identify a new campaign for Legislative Council periodic elections. The Red Jelly agency provided the winning concept – 'Your division. Your vote. Your voice.' which first appeared at the 2021 Legislative Council elections. The winning campaign was built around a megaphone visual device integrated into this call to action, and the use of animation rather than live action.

To reinforce the specific Legislative Council divisions going to election each year, Red Jelly created an easy-to-understand "puzzle" concept.

For video communications, such as the TV ads, the megaphone and puzzle device transition into each other.

Aboriginal Land Council of Tasmania elections

The Electoral Commissioner conducted the 2020–21 Aboriginal Land Council of Tasmania (ALCT) elections in accordance with the Aboriginal Lands Act 1995.

The Council consists of eight Aboriginal persons, two representing each of the South, North and North-West regions, and one representing each of the Flinders Island and Cape Barren Island groups.

The enrolment process for these elections included a period for individuals to apply to join the ALCT Roll. At the close of the application period, all new applicants were placed on the Preliminary Roll which was made available for a short objection period at all Service Tasmania shops.

Fifty-nine people applied to be on the Preliminary Roll, with none of those persons having objections lodged against their inclusion on the Roll. Therefore all 59 applicants were transferred to the Electors Roll, bringing the total number of ALCT electors to 626.

Results

The following persons were elected to the ALCT for a three-year term of office, to represent the areas shown:

Cape Barren Island group	Jim puralia meenamatta Everett
Flinders Island group	Joanne Willis
North region	Michael Mansell
	Adam Thompson
North-West region	Ashlee Kate Murray
	Michelle Purdy
South region	Colin Hughes
	Sara Maynard

ALCT elections are next due in 2023–24.

New look material

In order to increase participation, the Electoral Commissioner and the ALCT Chair agreed to redesign all enrolment and election paperwork to be more engaging, relevant to the community and simple to read. See samples in Appendix G.

House of Assembly casual vacancies

Details of these recounts are provided in Appendix D.

2020 Braddon recount

New Zealand Electoral Commission

- » New Zealand General election

Western Australian Electoral Commission

- » Western Australian State election

Elections ACT

- » Australian Capital Territory Legislative Assembly election

Collaborations with other departments

Interjurisdictional collaboration between government departments has become more common in the wake of the work required to manage the pandemic. This year the TEC has been able to support the Tasmanian public sector with the following activities.

- » Department of Justice Values: The Communications Officer undertook the graphic design work for the Department of Justice ahead of the launch of their new values in December 2020.
- » Justice of the Peace register: The TEC provided administrative support and performed searches on the national electoral roll database to assist the Department of Justice to consolidate and update their register of over 1,377 Justices of the Peace.
- » Department of Health vaccination hubs supplies: Following the 2021 Parliamentary elections, the TEC was able to supply the Department of Health with 400 bottles of hand sanitiser together with bulk quantities of gloves, masks and cleaning supplies that they intend to distribute to their vaccination clinics.

Innovations

The dual polling place model

For the 2021 Parliamentary elections, the TEC developed the “dual polling place” model which enabled electors to have a single voting process regardless of whether they were required to vote in one or two elections.

The model provided the best opportunity to maintain a high turnout for the Legislative Council elections but required new arrangements, processes and resources to ensure electoral compliance.

Elements of the new model

Separate electronic netbooks were needed at each issuing point so the elector's name could be checked off both election rolls if required.

Staff were required to undertake the following steps when issuing ballot papers:

- » ask the elector the three required questions,
- » find and mark the elector on the State election netbook and issue the relevant House of Assembly ballot paper,
- » use the elector details shown on the State election roll to search for the elector on the Legislative Council netbook. If found, issue the relevant Legislative Council ballot paper.

To ensure appropriate management of Legislative Council ballot papers and materials, new post close of poll processes were established and a 2IC was allocated to every dual polling place. The 2IC was responsible for all Legislative Council material, including its return to the returning officer. This enabled the polling place manager to remain at the polling place to manage the counting and return of the House of Assembly division ballot papers.

Dual polling place locations

The TEC did not have sufficient IT infrastructure to appoint all 262 polling places as dual polling places, therefore only polling places located within the electoral boundaries of the divisions of Derwent and Windermere were appointed as dual polling places on polling day.

Any Derwent or Windermere elector outside these areas could vote at any of the 15 pre-poll centres before polling day – which were all appointed as dual polling places. Five mobile polling teams provide dual voting services to all nursing homes within the electoral boundaries of the divisions of Derwent and Windermere, and at the main Hobart and Launceston hospitals. All seven interstate and territory electoral commissions were also appointed as dual pre-poll polling places.

New staff training for dual polling places

The TEC needed to rapidly develop new training materials for returning officers and their trainers to deliver to the casual staff operating dual polling places.

The TEC developed animations and hands-on materials to provide training for:

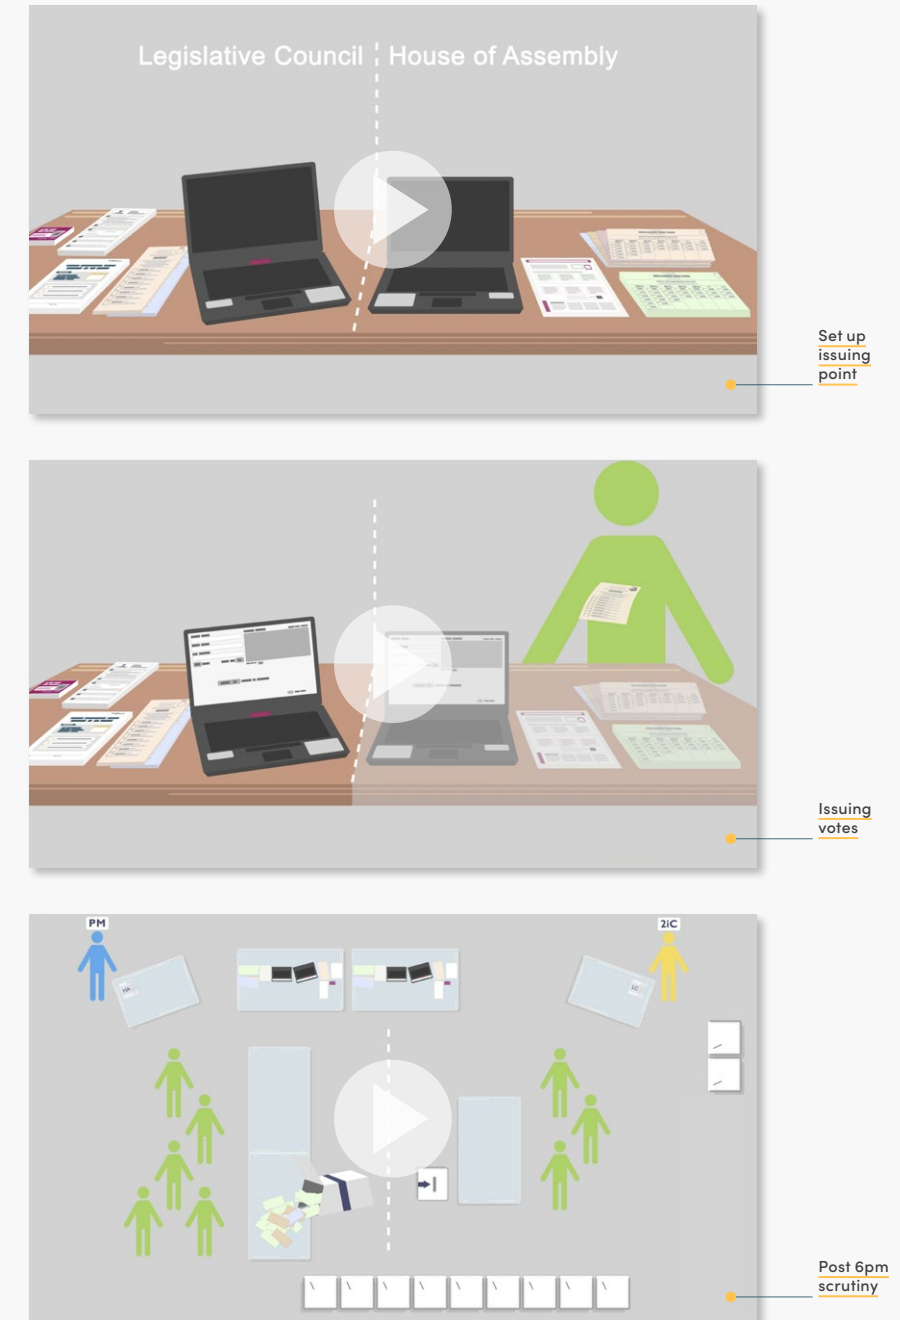

- » the issuing table configuration,
- » the new process of issuing ballot papers, and
- » the post 6pm activities for counting and packing ballot papers for each set of Parliamentary elections.

Local company Small Island Studio rapidly created scripts, story boards and clear, simple animations that were included in the eLearning packages for staff and again in their face-to-face training sessions.

Delivering the training presented its own challenges. A training program for dual polling places was provided at separate training sessions, where managers were given time to set up an issuing point with a set of materials equivalent to what they would be using on polling day. Throughout the session, the staff manipulated materials for both elections, and practiced the simple but effective separation of tasks required to conduct the post 6pm first preference counts.

Over 150 specialised kits of hands-on materials were required for the dual polling place training sessions – with production lead times necessitating printing and packing to commence while the design of the new materials and teaching plans were still being developed.

Seven trainers worked with returning officers and assistant returning officers to deliver 42 three-hour training sessions to over 430 polling place management staff across the seven days and evenings leading up to polling day.

Overlapping awareness campaigns

Two election awareness campaigns were produced and implemented for the 2021 Parliamentary elections:

- » the “Your division. Your vote. Your voice.” campaign for the 54,000 electors required to vote at the Legislative Council divisions of Derwent and Windermere elections, and
- » the “Your vote is BIGGER than you think” campaign for the 350,000 electors required to vote at the State election.

The former campaign was run by Red Jelly and the latter campaign by The20.

While for the majority of the election period, each campaign ran separately across television, radio and newspapers, the messages were meshed at three key points to provide complementary information for the electors.

The TEC purchased double page spreads in the three Tasmanian Saturday newspapers to provide a combined message for:

- » the “Announcement of candidates” (Saturday 10 April), and
- » “Polling places open on polling day” (Saturday 1 May).

In each case the right-hand page provided State election information and the left-hand page provided Legislative Council election information with half the page highlighting the responsibility of Derwent and Windermere voters to ensure they vote in both sets of Parliamentary elections.

In the week prior to polling day, television and radio advertisements presented information about both sets of Parliamentary elections in one cohesive message. In an exceptionally short production timeframe, the two advertising agencies collaborated to modify the animated Legislative Council campaign to incorporate a new character carrying the State election message.

Samples of the campaign materials are provided in Appendix G.

A thoroughly decent and kind man. A collaborative and intelligent leader.

Remembering Bruce Taylor

2020-21 was marked by the passing of Bruce Taylor, Tasmania's first Electoral Commissioner and one of the principal architects of the modernised Electoral Act 2004.

Bruce was born in Launceston in March 1949 and passed away in Hobart in May 2021. Growing up in Longford, Bruce joined the Australian Bureau of Statistics in Hobart in 1970, where he spent the majority of his time in Population Surveys.

He transferred to the Australian Electoral Commission in 1984, and joined the Tasmanian Electoral Office in 1993 for the implementation of universal postal voting for Tasmanian local government elections following the passage of the Local Government Act 1993. The complementary skills and styles of Chief Electoral Officer David Farrell and Bruce greatly served the state through a ground-breaking time of electoral administration.

Bruce succeeded David as Chief Electoral Officer in 2001 and set about modernising the Electoral Act 1985, with the Electoral Act 2004 receiving Royal Assent on 17 December 2004. While preserving the main elements of Tasmania's democratic system, the new legislation utilised modern drafting styles, established the independent Tasmanian Electoral Commission and empowered the Commission to approve forms and procedures, enabling it to swiftly adapt electoral administration in response to emerging technologies and challenges. Bruce became Tasmania's first Electoral Commissioner, serving with Richard Bingham, and then Liz Gillam, as TEC Chairs.

Bruce's time with us included the conduct of: six State elections, 18 years of periodic Legislative Council elections, eight rounds of ordinary local government elections, the 2008 Legislative Council electoral boundaries redistribution, the 2001 and 2009 Aboriginal Land Council of Tasmania elections, numerous local government elector polls, and many Parliamentary and local government recounts.

Bruce also contributed to the development of electoral elements of constitutions and regulations for many community groups and statutory bodies. As Commissioner, Bruce introduced the use of electronic certified lists in Tasmanian polling places, the establishment of an independent voting system for vision impaired electors, the expansion of Robson rotation for Parliamentary elections and an SMS elector reminder system.

Following Bruce's retirement after the 2010 State election, he continued to volunteer within the community.

Colleague reflections

David Farrell – Chief Electoral Officer 1992-2000

Bruce and I were very different. We were like chalk and cheese... with me screeching down the blackboard... to Bruce's King Island triple brie.

We became an inseparable team, in both the complementary and additive sense. Bruce always had your back. For three decades, we were there for each other, even though our lives took different paths. That's the wonder of a real friendship – tempered by shared challenge.

Julian Type – Deputy/Electoral Commissioner 2006-2016

A skilful negotiator, Bruce was always a calming and reasonable influence when things didn't quite go to plan, and was there unflinchingly to provide support rather than to point fingers.

The current Electoral Commissioner speaks of 'the giants on whose shoulders we stand': it isn't hyperbole when we remember Bruce Charles Taylor.

Michelle Davy – Senior Policy Officer 1995-present

Working alongside Bruce not only did I learn the craft of elections from one of the best, but I was also lucky enough to spend that time in the company of a thoroughly decent and kind man who became a role model and friend.

An agile thinker with an ability to simultaneously keep an eye on the minutiae and the big picture, Tasmanian elections were in very safe hands with Bruce. As was his team.

Nicole Lugg – Senior Policy Officer 1998-2020

Bruce was a thinker. Electoral issues that arose would always be carefully considered and analysed by Bruce. He valued corporate knowledge of staff and in discussions on electoral issues he actively listened to alternate points of views.

When children of staff visited the office, Bruce would treat them like VIPs with chocolate frogs offered from a secret stash primarily kept for his own children and, on occasions, for Parliamentary Counsel.

David Clark – former AEC colleague and close friend

His knowledge and dedication to the overall duties of his positions were maintained with a sense of responsibility and humour, using clear and concise communication skills. Bruce consistently showed a genuine concern for all his work colleagues as he had the innate ability to balance his work responsibilities with his family, personal and sporting interests.

In summary, Bruce Taylor was undoubtedly a unique stalwart for Tasmanian democracy.

3. A ballot was not required for one of these divisions.

4. The cost per elector for the 2020 elections included $5.78 cost per elector due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

These costs include the cost to the State of the State/Commonwealth joint roll arrangement, communication lines to the national roll management system, associated IT costs and the cost of providing the roll to members of the Tasmanian Parliament, registered parties and other organisations approved by the Commission under section 40 of the Electoral Act 2004.

5. These elections included only 28 of the 29 councils.

Party register

Political parties may apply to "register" under the Electoral Act 2004 with the TEC.

Party registration enables endorsed candidates to be listed under the name of the party on Parliamentary ballot papers.

As at 30 June 2021, the following 7 parties were registered under the Act (alphabetical order):

- » Animal Justice Party
- » Australian Federation Party Tasmania
- » Australian Labor Party
- » Jacqui Lambie Network
- » The Liberal Party of Australia, Tasmania Division
- » Shooters, Fishers and Farmers Party Tasmania
- » Tasmanian Greens

In 2020 a review of the party register was undertaken in accordance with section 58 of the Electoral Act 2004. As the applicable party registration forms were not completed and returned by the due date, the registrations of the Australian Christians and Socialist Alliance parties were cancelled on 26 October 2020.

On receipt of an application to cancel its registration, the Commission also cancelled the registration of Pauline Hanson's One Nation Party on 26 October 2020.
